

In the name of establishing a new look to the party, Gandhi has destroyed the existing organisational structure and failed to provide an alternative. His team of political managers may make good copy for English language magazines and newspapers, but they make no sense to the people at large. In the process of bringing changes within, the Congress has ended up losing the Lok Sabha and all Vidhan Sabha polls held thereafter.

Efforts by Rahul Gandhi's team at event management have borne no fruit thus far. As I've written in these columns earlier, the relationship between the Congress party and the Indian masses survived for over a century because all these years, its skippers had nurtured some very strong grass root leaders. It was through these state leaders that the Congress high command managed to connect with the masses. For Detail Report Click Here
